The closest prior art Hutsch et al. United States Patent Application Publication (Pub. No.: US 2001/0034771 A1), does not explicitly teach or render obvious the limitations embodied in applicant's invention.

Specifically, the limitation embodied in claims 1 & 19 i.e., creating a decision tree representing a decision making process for which said process advisor application is to be developed, whereby, the system and method includes a process mapping program for creating a decision tree, a compiler for compiling the decision tree into a data file, and a program for converting the data file into one or more computer viewable documents.

These specific constellation of elements are not explicitly disclosed or rendered obvious by the cited prior art. Therefore, on the basis and to the extent that these elements do not explicitly exist or rendered obvious, applicant's claimed invention is allowed over the cited prior art.
